"STOMP" is set to arrive at 3 p.m. Sunday, April 10 at the Honeywell Center.

'See what all the noise is about' on Sunday at the Honeywell Center

If you have a taste for rhythm, you probably already know about the famed show, "STOMP."

The "explosive, provocative, sophisticated and utterly unique" all-ages performance is set to arrive at 3 p.m. Sunday, April 10 at the Honeywell Center.

"The return of the percussive hit also brings some new surprises, with some sections of the show now updated and restructured and the addition of two new full-scale routines, utilizing props like tractor tire inner tubes and paint cans," said Honeywell Arts & Entertainment public relations specialist Michele DeVinney. "See what all the noise is about."

along with associate sponsor Kalenborn Abresist Corporation. Tickets may be purchased by calling 260-563-1102 or by visiting www.honeywellarts.org.

"Honestly it's just been a huge blessing. It's been great. We've had some awesome audiences so far. Just excited to be back performing live music with sometimes packed houses. It's nice to enjoy that same energy in the same room again," said cast member Jordan Brooks, during a recent phone interview. "The show is really great for audiences of all ages. Kids absolutely love the show. Parents. It's exciting, funny, high-energy. It's a fun escape from our everyday lives because we're just out there making music. It's things that pretty much anyone can relate to. Rhythm is something that everyone has within them it's how the world goes around. So it's definitely a show that absolutely anyone can enjoy. And typically everyone leaves with a huge smile on their face or drumming on their legs as they're walking out or trying to buy some drum sticks and drum on the railings of the stairs as they're walking out."

Brooks said he started playing piano at around 5 or 6 years old, with encouragement from his father, who was also a piano player in addition to being a drummer.

"He would perform with like a dad's band in my neighborhood," said Brooks. "So I kind of grew up with music in my household and wanted to be like my dad so he started to teach me some drum lessons when I was a kid."

Brooks said his mother took him to see a Drum Corps International performance when he was growing up. This experience, along with seeing his high school drumline in action planted the seeds of a potential career.

"I was like, 'Man, I want to do that.' So I got really hooked on marching band and drumline and from there started getting really into music like jazz and some classical stuff and knew I wanted to go to college for it," said Brooks.

Brooks said he started performing with "STOMP" in 2016. He was living in New York City finishing his master's degree at New York

Local property tax bills are due

Statements were mailed Tuesday, April 5; spring taxes due Tuesday, May 10

By ROB BURGESS
Wabash Plain Dealer Editor

For local property owners, it's that time of year again.

Spring and fall property tax statements for 2022 were mailed Tuesday, April 5, said Wabash County Treasurer LuAnn Layman.

"Yes, taxes always rise to cover what entities have in their budgets," said Layman. "And yes, there are people who are delinquent from last fall."

Layman said those with an escrow account on their property will receive a statement in the mail with the words "In Escrow" watermarked over them.

"Please do not pay this bill as we have also given the information to the lender to pay for you," said Layman.

Spring bills are due by Tuesday, May 10. Taxes that are not paid by the deadline will receive a penalty. One check may be used when paying both spring and fall installments.

Taxpayers may pay in person at the Wabash County Treasurer's Office in the Wabash County Courthouse building on the main floor from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, except for Good Friday, April 15 and Election Day, Tuesday, May 3, when they will be closed.

Layman said banks that will be collecting property

"The works by Ainsley and Layne were selected by some of the foremost leaders in the visual and literary arts for excellence in originality, technical skill and the emergence of a personal voice or vision," said Andrea Zwiebel. "Less than 2,000 works received a National Medal, which places them within the top 1 percent of all submissions."

Scholastics Art & Writing Awards is the nation's "longest-running, most prestigious recognition program for creative teens," said Andrea Zwiebel. Teens in seventh through 12th grades may apply in 28 categories of art and writing. This year, more than 100,000 students submitted more than 260,000 works of art and writing to the 2022 Scholastic Awards.

"I am proud of my students' innovative approach to visual art. Their unique concepts are what help make them stand out among 260,000 submissions," said Northfield art teacher Adam Zwiebel. "Both students were awarded in the top 1 percent of the nation, which is comparable to athletes competing at the national level."

program, instituted in 1976, recognizes the impact these family farms have made on the economic, cultural and social advancements of Indiana. Within the past 45 years, more than 5,800 farms have received the honor.

Two Hoosier Homestead award ceremonies are held each year – one at the Statehouse in April and one at the State Fair in August.

In August 2021, Chamberlain Farm in Urbana, which began operation in 1920, was honored with the Hoosier Homestead Centennial Award for its over 100 years of continuous operation.

In March 2021, the Schilling farm in Wabash County was honored with a Sesquicentennial Award. Located in North Manchester, the Schilling Farm has been in operation since 1854.

In September 2020, Wabash County's own Peden farm, which has been in continuous operation since 1905, was also honored.

In 2019, two of the honorees were from Wabash County: The Todd Floor Farm, established in 1918 and located in North Manchester, along with the Mary Ann Schenkel Farm, established in 1882 and located in Andrews, were both honored. Each farm received a Centennial Award. The two Wabash County farms were one of 96 in the state honored Aug. 9, 2019.

In 2018, the Walters and Duffey families were honored with Centennial Awards.

In 2017, the Orville and Phyllis Brodt farm, which has been in operation since 1879, was also honored with the Centennial Award.

"Farming is such an ingrained part of Indiana life, and something that makes our state so very special," said Rep. Dan Leonard, R-Huntington. "Hoosier farmers just don't know the word 'quit' and farming is in their blood. They work hard so they have something to pass along to their families. Our communities are all better off because of their efforts."

To be named a Hoosier Homestead, farms must be owned by the same family for at least 100 consecutive years and consist of more than 20 acres or produce more than $1,000 of agricultural products per year. The award distinctions are Centennial, Sesquicentennial and Bicentennial – for 100, 150 and 200 years respectively.

"Farms enrich our communities with all they provide," said Rep. Craig Snow, R-Huntington. "Farming is a tough, but rewarding business. Managing to keep any business, let alone a farm, going for 100 years is quite impressive and deserves recognition. My hat's off to them for all they've accomplished."

Never underestimate the power of a small beginning

By ROB TIPPEY

I am sure you have been asked the question, “Would you rather have a million dollars, or a penny doubled every day for a month?” It’s the choice between a million dollars immediately or $5,368,709.12. We love things that multiply.

“The Parable of the Mustard Seed and Leaven” is a parable about growth and transformation. This story on the surface is similar to that age-old question, but to the people hearing Jesus teach, if they had “ears to hear,” they had a chance to hear a deep spiritual truth that would change everything for them. Matthew 13:31-33

He told them another parable: “The kingdom of heaven is like a mustard seed, which a man took and planted in his field. Though it is the smallest of all seeds, yet when it grows, it is the largest of garden plants and becomes a tree, so that the birds come and perch in its branches.” He told them still another parable, “The kingdom of heaven is like yeast that a woman took and mixed into about 60 pounds of flour until it worked all through the dough.”

Mustard was commonly used in gardens back then and would have been known by most of the people hearing this story. And anyone who did any sort of baking would also understand the purpose and the power of the leaven. The point of both of these parables was how a common thing that is small has the possibility of exponential growth.

That’s what the kingdom of heaven is like. But, why did Jesus describe the kingdom like this?

The biggest reason Jesus told these two parables was to get the truth of the Gospel. Think about it. Like the mustard seed or the pinch of leaven, Jesus came here bringing God’s Kingdom in the smallest of ways... as a baby. But once he was here, He influenced countless people. He saved some from demon possession. He healed some from disease. He asked 12 men to follow him, but that small group grew exponentially.

One of the truths He brought with him was that all people, whether Jew or Greek, black or white, male or female ... would have a place in the kingdom. For God so loved the world that he gave his one and only Son, that whoever believes in him shall not perish but have eternal life. (John 3:16)

The mustard plant would grow big enough ... to the point where it would be filled with birds perched on it’s branches. What started as small with Jesus has grown enough so that everyone would have a place.

We are here today because of a small beginning. Never underestimate your small beginning. This is what the Kingdom of God is like.

Rob Tippey is the pastor of New Journey Community Church.

University for percussion performance. He saw that “STOMP” was doing open-call auditions.

“It’s a show that I obviously respected for a long time and I thought, ‘Man, let me give this a shot.’ So, I stood in line and auditioned in 2016 and I’ve been with the show ever since,” said Brooks.

Brooks said he and his fellow cast members all have their various exercise routines to stay in shape for such a physical show.

“We all come from different backgrounds. A lot of the cast members come from very high-level dance backgrounds and dance schooling. I come from more of a drumming background and others that are just incredible. We’ve got some comedians in the group and comedians who love the improv comedy,” said Brooks. “We all have our own individual exercise routines as well as coming in before the show and getting warmed up together and stretching and keeping our bodies healthy as we tour. Not to mention that we do some rehearsing before all the shows to make sure no one is getting hurt. There’s a lot of parts of the shows that require high physical demand but also require a lot of synchronicity between all of us on stage.”

The show was created by Steve McNicholas and Luke Cresswell in 1991. Brooks said the pair were the ones who have come up with the new objects they use in the show.

“When a new routine is added to the show, we typically keep it in the show for a while until there’s a change that’s made every couple of years,” said Brooks.

Brooks said the newest routine in the show involves suitcases, which they started performing in 2019, just a few months before the COVID-19 pandemic shut everything down.

“So a lot of people haven’t seen the new routine with suitcases,” said Brooks.

Brooks said even those who have seen the show many times before will have something new to look forward to.

“People who have maybe seen ‘STOMP’ three or four times in the past decade they’ve seen probably like three iterations of the show because you can come back and see it again and see it in a different light,” said Brooks. “But the props like shopping carts, tractor tire innertubes those are kind of newer numbers whereas brooms and trash cans and Zippos those are some of the more classic numbers. Not to mention the stomping and clapping.”

Brook said the evolving nature of the show is encouraged by the different combinations of cast members who make up the performers on any given night.

“It’s 12 of us who travel, but we only need eight to perform the show,” said Brooks. “The way that we can arrange the cast provides this new energy and this new life on the show from show to show, from night after night. It feels new and different in every town that we perform, which is what I think gives it so much life and why the show has been so successful for so long.”

DAILY SCRIPTURE

See what kind of love the Father has given to us, that we should be called children of God; and so we are. The reason why the world does not know us is that it did not know him.

1 John 3:1

The U.S. dollar's status is safe for now

Disruption is everywhere in the global economy. Russia's war in Ukraine – and sweeping western sanctions on Moscow – has wrecked havoc in commodity markets. The prospects for co-operation over addressing these supply problems look limited. The turmoil is contributing to rising inflation, which is at levels unseen in a generation. Such strains in the real economy have raised questions over whether the monetary order based on the U.S. dollar can remain unaffected.

Some change may be inevitable, but prevailing trust in the greenback will not be easily displaced. For now, the U.S. dollar's status as the leading global reserve currency is assured. It still makes up a majority of foreign exchange reserves and dominates trade invoicing. U.S. Treasuries are the safe asset of choice for global markets, while the country's institutions are still trusted and adept at managing crisis.

If threats to the dollar do emerge, they are unlikely to come from central banks diversifying some of their reserves away from U.S. dollars, towards smaller, western currencies. This trend has been held up as evidence that the need to hold U.S. dollars is fading as technology has made direct transfers between smaller currencies possible in ways that remove the need for the dollar to act as gatekeeper.

This may be so but most, if not all, of diversification's beneficiaries have well-established links with the greenback. Swap lines between the central banks of these countries and the Fed in effect make these currencies nodes in a broader dollar system. Those who hold them as reserves do so in the knowledge that access to dollar funding, and – if the need arises – a smooth "flight to safety", is practically guaranteed.

A bigger threat is that countries feeling the brunt of western sanctions might look to avoid transacting in and out of the US dollar. These countries certainly don't trust the currency in the same way that other players in global markets do – the US has shown a willingness to use the status of the dollar as an economic weapon. The most direct alternative here is a second monetary order built through China.

Beijing's digital currency program – which could soon enable relatively frictionless cross-border transactions – makes clear an ambition to improve the global attractiveness of the renminbi. However, while greater use of the currency might appeal to those shut out of dollar markets, its broader attractiveness as a replacement for the greenback is still questionable. China's unwillingness to loosen its control over offshore renminbi trading is a considerable barrier to any hopes of truly competing with the US dollar.

The US cannot afford to be complacent, though. The Fed has been slow to pick up on innovations in the digital currency space. This could yet prove to be costly as other countries look to gain a first-mover advantage. A digitized rival currency which combines ease of use across borders with access to relatively deep bond markets could pose a legitimate alternative to the dollar. Europe, for example, has long been determined to broaden global use of the euro and has its own well-developed digital currency program.

Control over the global reserve currency is sought after for a reason: the seemingly insatiable demand for dollars gives the U.S. a steady stream of funds that it can tap on demand, as well as an outsized influence over global economic affairs. These benefits mean that challenges to the dollar's status from other ambitious issuers are inevitable. But in the game for primary "reserve status," trust is hard won. At present, no other currencies seem ready to compete.

Nicotine unsafe for kids, teens and young adults

Most e-cigarettes contain nicotine – the addictive drug in regular cigarettes, cigars, and other tobacco products. A recent CDC study found that 99 percent of the e-cigarettes sold in assessed venues in the United States contained nicotine. Some e-cigarette labels do not disclose that they contain nicotine, and some e-cigarettes marketed as containing 0 percent nicotine have been found to contain nicotine. Nicotine can harm the developing adolescent brain. The brain keeps developing until about age 25. Using nicotine in adolescence can harm the parts of the brain that control attention, learning, mood, and impulse control. Each time a new memory is created or a new skill is learned, stronger connections – or synapses – are built between brain cells. Young people's brains build synapses faster than adult brains. Nicotine changes the way these synapses are formed. Using nicotine in adolescence may also increase the risk for future addiction to other drugs.

Scientists are still learning about the long-term health effects of e-cigarettes. Some of the ingredients in e-cigarette aerosol could also be harmful to the lungs in the long term. For example, some e-cigarette flavorings may be safe to eat but not to inhale because the gut can process more substances than the lungs. Defective e-cigarette batteries have caused some fires and explosions, a few of which have resulted in serious injuries. Children and adults have been poisoned by swallowing, breathing or absorbing e-cigarette liquid through their skin or eyes. Nationally, approximately 50 percent of calls to poison control centers for e-cigarettes are for kids 5 years of age or younger.

It is also important to know that many young people who use e-cigarettes also smoke cigarettes. There is some evidence that young people who use e-cigarettes may be more likely to smoke cigarettes in the future. Specifically, a 2018 National Academy of Medicine report found that there was some evidence that e-cigarette use increases the frequency and amount of cigarette smoking in the future. E-cigarettes also can be used to deliver other drugs, including marijuana; in 2016, approximately one-third of U.S. middle and high school students who have ever used an e-cigarette reported using marijuana in the device.

All this information is scientifically proven to be fact. And yet, our legislators passed legislation this last session to decrease the tax on some tobacco products to make them more affordable. Which only encourages to start and continue to consume these products. For some reason, they did not take any of this into consideration.

As a result, nicotine addiction could increase. Our young people could be lifetime users. Tobacco-related diseases and deaths will continue to be a problem, which will increase medical costs and insurance premiums.

How do we get this to stop? You could contact your legislator, who voted to decrease the tax, to let him know of your concern. Ask them to do better. Sen. Andy Zay may be reached by phone at 317-234-9441 or by email at s17@iga.in.gov. Rep. Craig Snow may be reached by phone at 317-234-9028 or by email at h18@iga.in.gov.

Quality of life spending is a conservative policy

Over the past year, I've had a friendly disagreement with a couple colleagues. Together we've authored several studies about economic development. Our work focuses on the role quality of life plays in population and job growth. This work uses statistical models to tease out how families and businesses rank every county in the U.S. on quality of life. The way this works is fairly intuitive, but it benefits from an economic thought experiment.

Suppose every home in America were identical, with the same construction, color scheme, size and appliances. In that case, the difference in home prices would tell us how much residents valued the community containing the home. Higher prices mean nicer communities, and lower prices mean less attractive communities.

Now suppose every worker in America were identical, with the same education and experience, and only one occupation were available. In that case, any wage difference would reflect how desirable the location was. Workers would demand a wage premium to live in an unpleasant place, and take a lower wage to locate somewhere nice.

These dynamics are known to every Realtor and human resource professional in America.

Of course we don't have identical homes or workers, but we can create statistically identical homes and workers by controlling for those things we know affect the price of a home or worker wages. Using that statistical model of home prices and wages, we can and wage – tells us how American families and businesses value each county in the nation.

This modest little measurement isn't perfect, but it explains a large proportion of population growth and an even larger share of employment growth among U.S. counties. In fact, it explains more job growth than differences in tax rates, tax incentives, economic development spending, highways or infrastructure spending combined.

This measure is much like a stock market price for every county. By itself, this measure doesn't explain why families and businesses are choosing these places. To why they chose each place, we correlated our measure of quality of life against roughly 500 different measures of amenities and local conditions. This was the interesting part that causes the friendly disagreement among the research team.

Some of the results made sense, such as a slightly warmer January temperature or cooler July, along with mountains. There's not much for a policymaker to change here. We found higher quality of life in places that had more arts and recreation establishments, more grocery stores and more recreational establishments. These are the big things that Mother Nature and the private sector provide. However, none of these things really explained much of the difference between quality of life in the United States.

The most significant factor was the share of the county GDP spent on K-12 education. Number two was a low crime rate and our third largest effect was a healthy environment as measured in resident average health. These findings weren't surprising. Economists have known for half a century that school quality alone accounts for about 30 percent of the price differences in homes. We've also known that crime reduces the value of a home, while places with more recreational opportunities affect home prices.

What surprised us was how large these effects were, and the best example was school spending and hilliness. Our model suggests that a 10 percent increase in school spending has a larger effect on quality of life than moving Pike's Peak into your county.

These results are not the source of our friendly disagreement. We agree on the math, which remains relatively immune to political disagreement. We also believe the results are not precisely measuring school spending, crime or local health. The spending is really a symptom of something more fundamental in local government. The reason for this is that places with good schools also have low crime and healthier people. Also, nicer places spend more money on their schools, and better-funded schools are nicer places to live.

Again, that isn't my feeble opinion; it is the result of a statistical model that revealed household and employer preferences in more than 3,100 U.S. counties. Of course, some readers will doubt the value of statistical models, and we acknowledge their imperfections. Looking at the results, the least desirable county in the nation, which has lost 85 percent of its population, is found in strip-mined West Virginia; the nation's most desirable county includes a Hawaiian beach.

More impressively, our model identified several outliers. These were places that did hugely better or worse than expected. We did this as a way to identify which places to visit to learn what our data might be missing. The big outlier we found was initially a big puzzle. It has mountains, a nice lake and airport, a local college and decent schools. After some digging we found that it is the national headquarters of the KKK. That's pretty good work for a statistical model of unexplained variation in home prices and wages.

The friendly disagreement among coauthors comes in how to interpret these results in a political context. My coauthors are progressive, and passionate about progressive ideas. I am a conservative, and value limited government and free markets. Our friendly debate centers on their belief that the quality-of-life issues we identify result in progressive policy options. On this, they are mistaken.

To be sure, higher government spending on schools, hiking trails or blight removal are popular among progressives. But, fundamentally, quality-of-life policies are classically conservative, rather than progressive.

Traditional conservatism in the United States always cherished local governance, local institutions and the sovereignty of the individual. This is the conservatism of James Madison's vision of government, Edmund Burke's description of civic life, and Adam Smith's description of free markets.

The ideas about quality of life aren't just conservative political theory, they are conservative in practice. For example, the State of Indiana calls for "knowledge and learning ... essential to the preservation of a free government" and calls upon the legislature to fund and encourage education. This is hardly the cry of progressivism, and with crime rates ranking as the second most important factor, there are no calls to 'defund the police' in our statistical model.

Moreover, about half of Indiana's counties have higher quality of life measures than San Francisco. That should surprise no one familiar with the deep failings of San Francisco's local government. Still, we Hoosier conservatives must admit, to ourselves at least, that we are focusing too few resources on the most important parts of quality of life. That is why most of our state bleeds people. One thing my progressive colleagues and I agree upon is that if we don't do better, we should expect a smaller, poorer state in the years to come.

Never underestimate a pound cake

It's time for a little comfort, and there is a sweet fix. Pound cakes are the pleasing plain-Janes of desserts: figurative no-nonsense confections that provide a welcome pick-me-up without wandering into sugary oblivion. In a world of bling and excess, these cakes are not to be underestimated. Their simplicity is their appeal, humbly playing it straight and ordinary, with no need to primp and accessorize.

Lynda Balslev

A pound cake was traditionally constructed of a pound each of butter, sugar, eggs and flour (hence its name), which yielded an exceptionally large cake. Over time, the ingredients ratio has shifted and reduced according to preference, conveniently producing a single loaf or Bundt cake. Subtle tweaks and discreet flourishes are sometimes added, such as a dash of spice, a sprinkle of citrus zest, a shower of confectioners' sugar or a drizzle of syrup. Adjustments and additions aside, in the end, the pound cake remains an unfailingly predictable and pleasing treat.

This recipe celebrates the end of the blood orange season. Any citrus is delicious in a pound cake, which is a natural canvas for the spark of citrus. Blood oranges are murkier and less bright than their navel brethren and add a deeper, fruity flavor to the cake. To match this depth, I swapped out some of the granulated sugar with light brown sugar and combined almond meal (flour) with all-purpose flour, yielding a denser, nuttier cake.

Blood Orange Pound Cake
Active time: 15 minutes
Total time: 1 hour and 15 minutes
Yield: Makes one loaf

Cake:
1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 cup almond meal
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon kosher salt
1 cup unsalted butter, softened
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup packed light brown sugar
3 large eggs
1/4 cup sour cream
Zest of 2 blood oranges
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
Syrup:
1/4 cup blood orange juice
1/4 cup sugar
Pinch of kosher salt

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Butter a loaf pan and line the bottom with parchment. Combine the flour, almond meal, baking powder and salt in a bowl and stir to blend.

In a bowl of an electric mixer fitted with a whisk attachment, mix the butter and sugars until light and fluffy. Add the eggs, one at a time, mixing well after each addition. Add the sour cream, orange zest and vanilla and mix to combine. Add the flour mixture, and using a wooden spoon, mix to blend without overmixing.

Spoon the batter into the prepared loaf pan and smooth the top. Bake in the oven until a wooden skewer comes clean, about 1 hour.

While the cake is baking, heat the syrup ingredients over medium-low heat, stirring to dissolve the sugar.

from the oven and transfer to a rack. Prick the top of the cake with a wooden skewer and brush with some of the syrup. Cool 10 minutes, then remove the cake from the pan. Brush the cake on all sides with the syrup. Cool completely. Serve dusted with confectioners' sugar or whipped cream.

Payment may also be made in the drop box located at the basement entrance of the Wabash County Courthouse.

Payment may also be made through the mail to Wabash County Treasurer, 1 W. Hill St., Suite 104, Wabash, IN 46992. Postmarks must be on Tuesday, May 10 or before. Taxpayers should enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope to receive a receipt back.

"I would suggest if you mail your payment on the due date that you ask the post office to hand stamp the date. In the past we have had payments that were put in the mailbox on the due date but did not get postmarked until the next day," said Layman.

Tax payments may now be paid with credit cards. Payments made with e-checks are $1 online per transaction. Payments made with Visa debit card have a $3.95 per transaction fee. Visa, MasterCard, Discover and American Express credit cards have a 2.65 percent per transaction fee, with a minimum of $3.95 per transaction. MasterCard and Discover debit cards have a 2.65 percent per transaction fee, also with a minimum of $3.95 per transaction.

Indiana law requires the county treasurer to add a late payment penalty to the unpaid portions of the amounts due for each installment of property taxes.

The penalty will be in the amount of 5 percent of the unpaid tax if the installment is completely paid on or before the 30 days after the due date and property owners are not liable for delinquent property taxes first due and payable in a previous installment for the same parcel.

Layman said taxpayers who did not receive all of their bills should contact the Wabash County Treasurer's Office.

Manchester track turns in a strong weekend

Enrique Salazar broke a 41-year-old record in St. Louis

By DILLON BENDER

The Manchester University outdoor track and field teams were back in action for a busy weekend of competition.

On Friday evening, a select few Spartans traveled to St. Louis to compete in the prestigious WashU Distance carnival. While in St. Louis, Enrique Salazar, from Plymouth, broke yet another Manchester record – one that had stood for over 40 years. Salazar ran to a sixth-place finish in the 10,000m following a time of 29:46.52. Salazar's time broke Jeff Niespodziany's record from 1981 by over a minute and stands as one of the top eight times in all of NCAA Division III this spring.

Additionally, on Friday, Elizabeth Lohman, from Fort Wayne and Carroll High School, ran the second-fastest time in MU history in the 3000m steeplechase after posting a time of 11:34.75.

On Saturday afternoon, the bulk of the outdoor track and field teams competed at the Grizzly Invitational hosted by Franklin College. The Manchester men led the five-team field with 161 team points while the women came home

Veteran Apache baseball players ready to lead Wabash to wins

The team will face Oak Hill at home on Monday, April 11

By CLAY MAXFIELD

With an Apache roster made up of five seniors and five juniors, the Apaches along with head coach Jack Holley are primed to let their veterans lead the way this 2022 season in hopes of a deep postseason run.

For Holley and the Apaches, Wabash's veterans are primed to lead the way.

"This has been an exciting year for us," Holley said. "The leadership this year that I've seen develop from we were a pretty young team last year with three starting freshmen and then we had three juniors as well. Those three juniors have really stepped up and become really good leaders for us."

Returning senior outfielder, Colten Learned returns to the Apache lineup as Wabash's leader in batting average from a season ago with .338 as well as 25 hits and a team-high 19 runs batted in.

Wabash's lineup will also be bolstered by returning junior and infielder and pitcher Justin Booth.

When posed with the idea of how his team has grown since last season, Holley pointed toward his team's improvement on the pitcher's mound.

"The amount of arms I have. ... The kids that I have returning, we see the confidence when they're doing their bullpen sessions this year and when we throw live, the command is there. Those little things that last year, they're young kids, we weren't sure about, but their confidence because they do have a year under their belt now," he said.

Of the returning pitchers from last year, Chayden Beeks stands out the most with his 3.18 earned run average from 2021.

Andrew Dillon and Learned will also serve as players that will strengthen the Apaches' bullpen.

With one game already under their belts, Wabash has started the season off on the right foot after a 4-3 victory over Wawasee while being led by Andrew

Manchester baseball ready to take '22 season by storm

Squires will begin their season on the road at Caston on Saturday, April 9

By CLAY MAXFIELD
Wabash Plain Dealer Freelance Reporter

Another year, another Squire roster ready to dominate. After a year of catch-up due to the canceled 2020 season, Rupley believes his team is rounding into form with a roster that is comprised of four seniors and one junior. “Last year, it was kind of a learning year because we didn’t have a season the year before and only had four kids coming back that had any varsity time,” Rupley said. “It took us half a year to kind of figure out where we were.” “We’ve got a better feel. The kids that are coming back have an understanding of what the level of play is at the varsity level. So, I think as far as that part of it goes, we’ve improved quite a bit.” On the mound, Manchester will run with a combination of Ethan Espeset, Raice Martin and Justin Hall while Garrett Sites will catch. Returning as the team’s leaders in the batter’s box will begin with Justin Hall who batted nearly .400 last season while serving as the team’s current leader for runs batted in along with sophomore Garrett Sites who will serve as a key contributor on offense. “I think we have kids that can get the bat on the ball,” Rupley said. “Overall, we don’t have any super fast guys but we’ve got some decent team speed. ... We’ve got people who can maybe if they get a gap hit can score from first base.” “As far as getting the bat on the ball, I think we’ll be better than last year.” In terms of improvement, Rupley noted his current batch of sophomores has made a noticeable jump in improvement after spending their freshmen year on the varsity roster. “Those kids as freshmen have grown, they’re stronger. That makes a little difference too because you can just see it in their arm strength and the way they swing the bat, the way the ball comes off the bat,” Rupley said. Manchester will begin their season on the road at Caston on Saturday, April 9 before hosting Bluffton on Tuesday, April 12 for their home opener. If the preseason mentality is a precursor for how the Squires season will go, Rupley expects it to be a solid one. “I think the kids, they’ve been attentive in practice and intense,” Rupley said. “They’re taking things seriously and you know, seniors, it’s their last go around. ... With a sophomore group and the senior group and then these three freshmen kids, they’ve got a good knowledge of the game and they’re very attentive and they’ve been coming along pretty good.” Clay Maxfield, Wabash Plain Dealer freelance reporter, may be reached by email at sports@wabashplaindealer.com.

Manchester baseball topped in a doubleheader at Bluffton

Spartans to return to Gratz Field on Saturday, April 9 against Rose-Hulman

By DILLON BENDER

The Manchester University baseball team was edged in Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference (HCAC) action at Bluffton University on Tuesday, April 5. The Black and Gold were defeated by the Beavers by final scores of 4-3 and 11-2. Ryan Mueller, from Cincinnati, Ohio, and Cincinnati Hills Christian Academy, and Gavin Gleason, from Brookston and Delphi Community

High School, both recorded a pair of hits in the opening game against the Beavers. In the top of the fourth inning, Cole Filson, from Plymouth, got the Spartans on the scoreboard with a sac fly to right. Later in the inning, Ryan Mueller would hit an RBI double to left that would tie the game at 2. Bluffton managed to recapture the lead with two runs in the home half of the fourth inning and rode effective pitching for the win in the opening game of the day. Gavin Gleason also doubled home a run in the first game on Tuesday. In the second game of the day, Harrison Pittsford, from Ellettsville and Edgewood High School, gave the Spartans an early 2-0 lead in the first inning after connecting on a two-run double to left-center. The Spartan bats would then be held in check as Bluffton would tally 11 unanswered runs en route to the doubleheader sweep. Bluffton starting pitcher Austin Collinsworth tossed a complete game, allowing just two runs on five hits. Manchester (5-12, 2-2 HCAC) is scheduled to return to Gratz Field on Saturday, April 9 for an HCAC doubleheader against Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology. Game time on Saturday is currently scheduled for noon. Dillon Bender is the sports information director for Manchester University.

Dillon from the mound. Dillon struck out eight batters in five innings pitched. To compete each night, Holley believes his team needs to keep the focus on themselves and what they can control on the field. “Defensively, I think we’re going to be really sound,” Holley said. “We told the kids, we can’t let that just take us over top and if things don’t go well to kind of fall. We just need to keep an even tilt across there to make sure that we’re in each and every game. We just worry about us.” Wabash will face Oak Hill at home on Monday, April 11. Clay Maxfield, Wabash Plain Dealer freelance reporter, may be reached by email at sports@wabashplaindealer.com.

BELTONE’S SPRING HEARING EVENT

Hearing Loss Makes Your Brain Work Harder

If you are struggling to hear, you don't just miss a few sounds here or there. New research shows that adults with hearing loss experience a 40% faster decline in cognitive abilities. This suggests that the entire brain may be struggling to fill in the gaps caused by untreated hearing loss.

Thankfully, research is showing that when hearing loss is detected early and treated with hearing aids, the brain can reorganize itself back to its usual operation. With hearing aids, you're not only taking care of your hearing and your relationships, but you have the potential, because of the auditory stimulation, to provide benefit for your brain health. Hearing loss is not just about your ears.

You may think the simple solution is to just turn the TV louder or ask your kids or grandkids to speak up, but even a mild hearing loss can affect you in countless ways. If your hearing is at all impaired, your brain must work harder, trying to make out words and sounds. A hearing loss can make it harder to interact in social situations, to spend time with family, or to be productive at work.

THE SOLUTION: Resolve to schedule a free hearing screening. It's quick, easy, and will provide you with the information you need to move forward in life.

Call today to schedule your appointment with Beltone for the following FREE services:

- FREE hearing screening—a complimentary hearing screening with our professional staff.
- FREE ear examination — It may just be wax!
- FREE hearing aid cleaning if you currently wear hearing devices.

Aging dog’s care becomes obstacle in relationship

DEAR ABBY: I’m in a seven-year relationship with a beautiful woman I love and would do anything in the world for. I feel she would do the same for me. She has a dog, “Preston,” who she loves and who has been with her since puppy-hood. At 16, Preston is failing badly and is on his last legs. There is no doubt his time is coming.

We had planned on meeting my son and grandchildren for a family celebration after a seven-hour drive. Her plan was to accompany me, but now, because of Preston’s condition, she has changed her mind. I understand that. However, she’s now angry that I am going alone.

I spend every day with her and go out of my way always to support her. She has no grandchildren, having lost her only daughter two decades ago. I will be gone for only a weekend and return in plenty of time to be with her afterward.

I haven’t seen my three granddaughters in a year, and who knows when I will again. Should I feel guilty about leaving her and the dog? I am stuck in the middle here, and am going to upset her or my son’s family no matter what I do. — Man In The Middle

DEAR MAN: You stated that your significant other’s only child died 20 years ago. It is possible that puppy Preston became like a child to her, and losing him is causing her to revisit the loss of her daughter. If there is any way to manage it, postpone the visit with your son and his family until later in the year, after Preston’s passing, or have them come to you. If that’s not possible, because it’s only a weekend, go see your son and your grandkids but remain in contact with her from afar during the visit.

DEAR ABBY: My first husband was abusive, and I divorced him after less than four years of marriage. We had two daughters. In 2016, I remarried, this time to a loving, caring man. My oldest daughter was my maid of honor. A year after our wedding, she married her soul mate. Her father and I, including our current spouses, paid for their reception.

Since 2017, this daughter has continually asked us for financial assistance. At first we helped, but after a terrible argument, we drew the line, and she decided to sever our relationship completely. She sees us occasionally during holidays and is cordial, but she doesn’t call or text for my birthday or Mother’s Day, which is very hurtful.

I don’t know where to turn, except to pray. I don’t want to be estranged anymore. I miss her terribly, but do not want to be financially taken advantage of any longer. Any advice would help. — Heartbroken In Delaware

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Would you really like to receive birthday and Mother’s Day greetings knowing they didn’t come from the heart and that you were paying for them? This is what your daughter’s actions have revealed. You have not caused this estrangement; she has, because you turned off the spigot.

I’m sure you are hurting, because that is what your daughter intends. Since prayer hasn’t helped you cope with this, consult a licensed mental health professional, and I suspect you will have better results. You have my sympathy.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Palm Sunday

Q: What’s the significance of Palm Sunday? Is it more like Christmas Eve ... the excitement before the big event? — R.W.

A: What we’ve come to know as Palm Sunday was a day when, in the city of Jerusalem, a great crowd of people gathered and welcomed Jesus, proclaiming, “Hosanna!” They spread palm branches before Him and praised His Name, “Blessed is the King who comes in the name of the Lord” (Luke 19:37-38). In less than a week’s time, many of these same people were shouting, “Crucify Him!” They felt Jesus had let them down. They were disappointed that Jesus had not done what they thought He would do — establish His kingdom on Earth, overthrowing Rome and its power over the people. Rome was at the height of her glory when a disturbing sect called Christians began to grow. After Jesus had been crucified and resurrected, He commanded His disciples to go into the world and proclaim the Good News of the kingdom to come. The message was so hated that Christians began to be persecuted. The Roman high tribunal initiated a drive to stamp out Christianity as a disturber of pagan unity, for they mistakenly thought that a person’s conscience could be controlled by law, so they made it illegal to be different, claiming that all must bow to Caesar, all must conform to pagan custom, and all must behave like true Romans.

Time hasn’t changed human nature. The world is still trying to put its stamp of conformity on followers of Jesus Christ. Regardless of the pressures to conform to the world, believers in Christ are called to hold God’s standard high. “Do not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind” (Romans 12:2). Conforming to His standard and reflecting His image without compromise is what brings glory to the King of kings.

THY WILL BE DONE

“Going a little farther, he fell with his face to the ground and prayed, ‘My father, if it be possible, may this cup be taken from me. Yet not as I will, but as You will!’” (Matthew 26:39)
Even Jesus, God’s only Son, was subject to human emotion while He lived and preached on earth. Yet, He had total faith in His Father; Jesus accepted the will of God. Had Jesus not died, had He not paid for our sins on the Cross, humanity could not have realized the concept of God’s unconditional mercy and forgiveness. This Easter, as you worship, won’t you meditate on God’s gift of forgiveness and pray for acceptance of God’s will? In all circumstances, have faith and know you are loved. Happy Easter!
